

CASA ALLE VACCHE VERNACCIA DI SAN GIMIGNANO

Vernaccia has always been seductive. Poor Pope Martin IV was consigned by Dante to Purgatory on account of his inordinate fondness for eels stewed in Vernaccia. Today the wine is even better, with or without the eels. From the slopes below the many towers of San Gimignano the Ciappi family give us this delightful version: medium-bodied, with almonds and lime on the nose, linden flowers on the palate and a hint of bitterness on the finish. Almost worth a little extra time in the waiting-room for heaven.

CASA ALLE VACCHE VERNACCIA DI SAN GIMIGNANO

Vernaccia has always been seductive. Poor Pope Martin IV was consigned by Dante to Purgatory on account of his inordinate fondness for eels stewed in Vernaccia. Today the wine is even better, with or without the eels. From the slopes below the many towers of San Gimignano the Ciappi family give us this delightful version: medium-bodied, with almonds and lime on the nose, linden flowers on the palate and a hint of bitterness on the finish. Almost worth a little extra time in the waiting-room for heaven.

CASA ALLE VACCHE VERNACCIA DI SAN GIMIGNANO

Vernaccia has always been seductive. Poor Pope Martin IV was consigned by Dante to Purgatory on account of his inordinate fondness for eels stewed in Vernaccia. Today the wine is even better, with or without the eels. From the slopes below the many towers of San Gimignano the Ciappi family give us this delightful version: medium-bodied, with almonds and lime on the nose, linden flowers on the palate and a hint of bitterness on the finish. Almost worth a little extra time in the waiting-room for heaven.

CASA ALLE VACCHE VERNACCIA DI SAN GIMIGNANO

Vernaccia has always been seductive. Poor Pope Martin IV was consigned by Dante to Purgatory on account of his inordinate fondness for eels stewed in Vernaccia. Today the wine is even better, with or without the eels. From the slopes below the many towers of San Gimignano the Ciappi family give us this delightful version: medium-bodied, with almonds and lime on the nose, linden flowers on the palate and a hint of bitterness on the finish. Almost worth a little extra time in the waiting-room for heaven.